Despair is the seventh novel by Vladimir Nabokov, originally published in Russian, serially in the politicized literary journal Sovremennye zapiski during 1934. It was then published as a book in 1936, and translated to English by the author in 1937. Most copies of the 1937 English edition were destroyed by German bombs during World War II; only a few copies remain. Nabokov published a second English translation in 1965; this is now the only English translation in print.

Despair (novel) - Wikipedia

DESPAIR, a short novel by Vladimir Nabokov, exposes one man's descent into evil. The story begins with the curiously named Hermann Hermann (a wearer of tangerine gloves) stumbling across a vagrant who he instantly sees as being his doppelganger. The chance encounter with the tramp haunts and excites Hermann, and slowly he hatches a dastardly plot.

Despair (Penguin Modern Classics): Amazon.co.uk: Nabokov ...

In Despair, one of Nabokov's first forays into English prose, there is an early adumbration of what will become the enchanting monster, Humbert Humbert, found in the narrator-murderer Hermann. But aside from the faint outline of what is to come, Despair is a brilliant novel in itself, removed from the nympholept Vladimir Nabokov is a genius.

Vladimir Nabokov, Despair. Despair, Nabokov’s seventh novel, written in Russian, dates from the mid-1930s. It was begun in 1932, serialized in 1934, published as a book in 1936, and translated into English by the author in 1937; Nabokov revised the translation—and, as he notes in his preface, the book itself—for its American publication in 1965. The American reader will encounter a text that, while not as complex, shares the verbal, generic, and ideological game-playing of Lolita and ...
