Top Tip Amateur Photographer editor Nigel Atherton says, 'You get one free entry with every copy of AP, but don't forget that you can buy additional entries from Photocrowd to increase your chances of winning. When it comes to choosing an image to submit, consider how it looks at smaller sizes – this is often the way judges will first come across your image and may make their initial judgement based upon it.'

Like anything else in photography, follow the rule of thirds. Divide your frame into a grid like the one you see in the image above, then place your subject on one of the intersections to create balance in your photo. If you're having a hard time imagining the lines, you can switch on the grids on your camera screen to help you compose.
